■ We have run over the chief commercial control in the Far East in order to indicate the probable area of circulation of the British dollar. It is not intended to demonstise the Mexican dollar or the Japanese yen even in our own colonies where they are now legal tender, or to immedistely supplant existing coinage. The new British dollar is primarily a measure of procaulion designed to supplement the existing coinage, and to guard against ourrency scarcities and similar derangements in Eastern mercantile fluance. THE ANGLO-JAPANESE TREATY ∵OF 1894.

The following is the latter of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, drawn up by its India China, and Colonial Committee, to the Foreign Office in regard to the mode of converting the ad valorem duties under the New Treaty with

Sir,—In pursuance of a promise made by a deputation from this Chamber which waited upon you on Dec. 27, I am instructed by the Board of Directors to forward the following observations upon the treaty recently concluded between Her Majesty's 'sovernment and that of Japan :--The rule for converting the ad valorem into specific duties appended to the tariff annex in

I the treaty is that they are to be calculated on the actual cost of the articles at the place of parobase, production, or fabrication, with the addition of the cost of insurance and transportation: mission if any exists." Reading this rule in connection with the second paragraph of section l of the protocol of July 16th attached to the treaty, the Board understands that the medium prices in Manchester of cotton varus and goods expirted to Japan during the six calendar months preceding the date of the protocol, plus the cost of export, are to be taken as the basis for the conversion. But the question arises, at what rate of exchange are the sterling prices at the port of MR. MORETON FREWEN ON PROS. The rate of exchange is constantly varying, and if the experience of the last few years may be taken as an indication of its future course, the actual ad valerem equivalents of the fix d specific duties will be liable to very important fluctuation: from time to time. JAPAN AND HAWAII.

There are many who believe that the Hawaiian Republic is more in danger from Japanese interference than from any native uprising incited by the Queen and her active adherents. There is some ground for this apprehension. The Japaness comprise a large percentage of the population. In 1890 they ranked third in number, Chinese being second to the native population. Admiral Walker in his report to Secretary Herbort, recently made public, atutes as a fact that. Japan wants the right of suffrage ex ended to her subjects it the ishmils, and that she manifests much earnestness in the demand. Thus far the Republic has declined to accord and it probably continues to govern the islands. Just now Japan, of nourse, has business in China sufficient to encoge h rentire attention.

"But," said the Admiral, "while we keep one eye on England, with the determination that the fruits of New England work at the islands shall not go for naught, we should also keep the other payments are there made by weight and not by great. Pacific power. She is anxious to establish colonies after the manner of England and pursue a like commercial policy. With some 20,000 of ppearance of the better portion of the carrency her subjects at Hawaii," he continued, "and s opnsiderable and growing navy intelligently watching at the islands in view of her vault > ing ambition." There is doubtless truth in these opinions of naval officers of so high repute. They have had exceptional opportunities of observation, and it as their basiness to form conclusions from facts coming within their knowledge. There is comparatively little difference in ease of nocess to Hawaii from Japan than from the United States, and her naval strength is far easier of concentration than our own. Speaking of this feature, Admiral Belknap says :- 'At the recent naval review at New York we had but nine vessels of our own, yet in April, 1890, I saw the Mikado review twenty-two ships of his imperial fleet at things, most of them being of European construction, some of them very heavy ironolads, others fast craisers like the Charleston, and all armed with Krupp and Armstrong rifled cannon. In this," he added, "you will see something of the significance of the maritime progress of that notable people in little more than one generation."

Since the foregoing words were uttered by Admiral Belknap, the power of the Japanese navy has had opportunity for demonstration, as also the capacity of its officers and bravery of the craws. It has practically annihilated the mayy of an enemy, which was itself thought worthy of consideration in possible contingencies of conflict. With but little comparative loss either in men or ships, Japan has practically driven China off the sea. She is still adding to her fleet, and the Emperor is so earnest this intent that he contributes an immensa sain annually from his private purse and leves a tax of 10 per cent. upon all official valueries to be devoted to navalertension. When Japan gets through her from the place of purchase, production, or fabri- present war, it would seem to be the part of wisdom that a few of our war ships and cruisers should be on the Pacific coast, within hail of the navy department and within reasonably easy reach of the Hawaiian group. It may be added that hereafter without especial reference to llawaii, it would seem advisable and not an excess of precaution that our naval strength in Pacific waters be permanently increased. There may at any time be sharp and sudden need of it.—Seattle Post Intelligence.
